Gangadhar Meher University (GMU) in Sambalpur, Odisha, has a comprehensive security system designed to ensure the safety of students, staff, and visitors. The campus is guarded by 27 numbers of trained security personnel including female security guards stationed at key entry and exit points, providing round-the-clock vigilance. These personnel monitor the flow of individuals and vehicles to maintain security. The university is also equipped with CCTV cameras in strategic locations, including academic buildings, libraries, hostels, and common areas, allowing for real-time surveillance and quick response to potential threats. Access to the campus and certain restricted areas requires ID verification, ensuring only authorized individuals are permitted entry. Hostel security is given particular importance, with dedicated guards and strict entry rules in place for residents and authorized visitors, creating a secure living environment. In addition, GMU has implemented emergency response protocols that work in coordination with local law enforcement and emergency services, ensuring prompt action in case of medical, fire, or other security-related incidents. This multi-layered security approach helps create a safe and supportive environment for academic activities and campus life at GMU.
